Narrative:

Information: This is a supplemental report to a Malicious Destruction of Property investigation initiated by me on Tuesday, 3/3/15.

Investigation: This afternoon, I met IT manager to review video from cameras within the Auto Lab. We watched several minutes spanning the time frame in which the damage was suspected to occur. Between 1:25 and 1:26 PM, the computer monitor is observed to fall over, bounce up and then fall back down. No one was noted to be in the area near the monitor.

Writer returned to the Auto Lab to re-examine the scene. The monitor was in fact broken. There didn't appear to be anything present that may have fallen from the ceiling or wall. On the table next to the computer and monitor is a brake fluid tester and a small bottle with a tube that would appear to be for test samples. Writer noted in the area of the monitor stand, the table was damp with fluid - probably brake fluid.

Writer theorized that perhaps the fluid may have weakened the plastic, causing the stand to collapse.

Writer re-contacted instructor to advise him. He indicated he isn't sure where that tester came from.
